About the founder

I'm Andrea 'Pastor Angie' Palmer, a Black, autistic stationer, and the owner of Mohawkmomma Studio Boutique in Atlanta, GA.

I've waited several years for an awareness week and day to spotlight stationery in the world of Black excellence and empowerment, but I could no longer wait another year. So, I decided in 2024, to be the one to promote and support Black stationery creators and shop owners in bringing this awareness week and day to life.

AUGUSTUS WASHINGTON

ONE OF THE FIRST KNOWN BLACK STATIONERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

ANNIE MINERVA TURNBO-MALONE

PRIMARILY KNOWN FOR HER SUCCESSFUL LINE OF HAIR CARE PRODUCTS, SHE ALSO OWNED A STATIONERY SHOP IN THE EARLY 1900S.

LOUISE E. JACKSON

SHE OWNED A STATIONERY AND GIFT SHOP IN NEW YORK CITY IN THE 1920S. SHE WAS A PROMINENT FIGURE IN THE HARLEM RENAISSANCE AND USED HER SHOP AS A MEETING PLACE FOR ARTISTS AND INTELLECTUALS.

About The Week

Welcome to a week-long celebration of excellence, empowerment, creativity, and cultural significance – National Black Stationery Week!

From February 22nd to February 28th, we invite you to join us in honoring the beauty and versatility of Black folks in stationery. Culminating in World Black Stationery Day on February 28th, this week-long movement during Black History Month is a tribute to the timeless tradition of using stationery as a means of expression, advocacy, and artistic exploration, past and present.

National Black Stationery Week

Feb 22nd - 28th

there's something transformative about the power of Black stationery.
So join us in embracing the excellence and empowerment of Black brilliance. ✨

LET YOUR IDEAS SHINE AND YOUR VOICE BE HEARD ON THE PAGES OF POSSIBILITY.
